Help: Are you legally married?

Your will should accurately reflect your situation at the time that you sign it. For example: If you are separated but not officially divorced, you would be considered married and should answer "Yes". If you are engaged but not officially married, you would be considered single and should answer "No". It is generally a good idea to make a new will when your marital status changes.

Leave a gift to Enduring Love Foundation

FreeWill is free to you because of the support of organizations such as Enduring Love Foundation that work on meaningful issues. Will you consider leaving a gift in support of a cause that is important to you? Click 'No thanks' if you don't want to leave any gifts to charity at this time.

The purpose of the Enduring Love Foundation is to bring pleasure, praise and people to God through a permanent endowment fund for the duration of this world. The intent of the fund is to augment our regular tithes and offerings through special gifts and legacy stewardship. Gifts received by the Foundation are permanently restricted for the sole purpose of being invested to produce income to finance FBCUC mission activities. This website represents an expansion of our mission to provide a means through which 100% of our congregation can ensure peace of mind and the security of their families by preparing legacy documents without cost. Founded in 2002, the endowment has provided more than $658,000 to support a myriad of FBCUC missions and activities, including development of our church plant in Haiti, support of church starts in Tacoma, Portland, Schertz and New York City, the purchase of land and development of Communion Park and Communion Garden, outreach benevolence to our church and community to include Crisis Pregnancy Center and World Hunger, along with other similar projects. The Foundation is "Where Your Gifts Keep on Giving".

Many Christians like to leave gifts to charity in their will. Will you join them?

Digital Executors

Your digital executor's primary responsibility is to distribute your digital assets to the beneficiaries that you specify. In order to fulfill this responsibility, your digital executor will have the power to access, download, and backup digital assets, convert file formats, access to any devices as necessary to manage digital assets, to clear computer caches and to delete files.

By default, your estate's executor will also serve as your digital executor. Would you like to nominate someone else to act as your digital executor instead?*

A “no-contest clause” is a provision that discourages challenges to your estate plan. It states that anyone who baselessly challenges the distributions you've made will be treated as though they've predeceased you—in other words, they will not receive any gifts you have left them.

Independent Administration

Illinois, Missouri, Texas, Louisiana, California, and Nevada permit independent administration of estates, largely free of court supervision. This means that after an executor is approved and an inventory of the estate's assets is filed with the court, the executor can administer the estate with minimal further court involvement or supervision. For example, an executor can settle claims by creditors, sell assets for the payment of taxes, and distribute property to estate beneficiaries, all without the court's oversight or approval. Even if your state does not currently permit independent administration, you can still include language authorizing it in your will if you like - that way, if your state law someday changes, or you move to one of the states that do permit it, your wishes will be clear.

Would you like to give permission for your estate to be administered independent of court supervision?

Mirror Wills

Mirror Wills are Wills made by two individuals (most commonly spouses or partners) with similar wishes for the distribution of their estates. When your Will is mirrored, your spouse's name will replace your name and vice versa. Mirror Wills generally aren't suitable for couples with different wishes or if there are children from prior relationships.

Learn more about Mirror Wills

If you listed a nonprofit as a primary beneficiary in your Will, the gift will also appear in your spouse's Will as a part of the mirroring process. This will result in two identical gifts, one made upon your passing and one made upon your spouse's passing. Please review your plan and click here if you need to make any adjustments (e.g., gift amount).
